

Update on Hydro Tasmania's response to COVID-19 and supplier arrangements

Hydro Tasmania is committed to communicating with all its stakeholders as we respond to the changes driven by COVID-19. You, our suppliers, are critical to our ability to keep the lights on.

A key part of our response is helping you as a valued business partner manage through these difficult times. We are committed to assisting our suppliers and wider community to be as best placed as possible to navigate both immediate and longer term economic challenges, including post-COVID-19 recovery.

We are closely monitoring State and Federal Government COVID-19 directives to take all appropriate protection measures for our clients, employees, suppliers and the community. We need to be agile and responsive to what can be a rapidly changing set of challenges. An overview of our response and closed work locations can be found on our website www.hydro.com.au/covid-19.

Business as usual with some restrictions

Hydro Tasmania's business continuity planning and implementation aims to minimise the impact of COVID-19 on our business. While some activities will be exempt due to the essential nature of our services, others may be affected moving forward in response to current and new Federal or State Government directions. This may result in some supply and delivery of work changing (eg delivery to a different site) through to the possibility of suspension of works delivery or supply. We will endeavour to minimise impacts on you wherever possible.

If you have any concerns or queries please contact your Hydro Tasmania representative. This includes requests for support, such as facilitating travel exemptions to facilitate essential service delivery through to working around specific challenges you are encountering as a business to provide goods or services to Hydro Tasmania.

Hydro Tasmania is committed to working collaboratively with all its suppliers to navigate the COVID-19 challenge, and to do what we can towards positioning your business to recover from its impacts as a valued business partner.

As we respond to new challenges we will continue to keep you up to date.

Thank you for your efforts in these unprecedented times, and I wish your workforce and families all the best - stay safe and healthy.
