How Chase Travel Pricing Works

Understanding Chase Travel pricing requires breaking down several key components: ☎️||+1→888→483→9719

1. Cash Pricing

When booking with cash, Chase Travel displays the total price upfront, which may include taxes and fees. The platform partners with airlines, hotels, and car rental agencies to provide competitive rates, often comparable to public pricing.

- Flights: Prices are dynamically calculated based on airline pricing, availability, and travel dates.
- Hotels: Prices can vary by room type, occupancy, and length of stay. Taxes and resort fees are typically included in the final checkout.
- Car Rentals: Rates depend on the vehicle type, rental duration, location, and insurance coverage.

2. Points Pricing

For Chase Ultimate Rewards cardholders, points can be used to book travel. The value of points depends on the card type:

- Chase Sapphire Preferred®: Points are worth 1.25 cents each when redeemed for travel.
- Chase Sapphire Reserve®: Points are worth 1.5 cents each when redeemed for travel.
- Other Chase cards: Standard redemption may vary, usually around 1 cent per point.

Example: A \$500 flight would cost 40,000 points if using a card that values points at 1.25 cents each ( $500 \div 0.0125 = 40,000$  points).

3. Fees and Restrictions

While Chase Travel pricing is generally transparent, some additional fees may apply:

- Cancellation fees: Vary depending on the airline or hotel's policy.
- Change fees: Some bookings allow free changes; others may charge a fee.
- Resort and service fees: Hotels often include additional charges not always visible until checkout.

It's important to review the fare rules and policies before completing a booking.
